Co-Sponsors are Council President Fani-González, Councilmember Stewart, and Council Vice President Balcombe. A public hearing on the bill is tentatively scheduled for October 6 at 1:30 p.m.

Bill 42-26 would:

- (1) require a short-term rental platform to verify a rental license before listing a short-term rental in the County;
- (2) require the Department of Housing and Community Affairs to provide an electronic system for verifying short-term rental licenses;
- (3) prohibit a short-term rental platform from collecting or processing payment for an unlicensed rental;

- (6) generally amend the law governing short-term rentals in the County.

BACKGROUND

Under the County's short-term residential rental (STRR) law, STRR rental is generally a rental of a room or dwelling for less than 30 consecutive days. The operator must obtain and renew a County license annually with the Department of Housing and Community Affairs (DHCA).

An application for a STRR includes, among other things, that the unit is the applicant's primary residence; and any online rental listing includes the County short-term residential rental license number. The operator is solely responsible.

County law does not extend or place direct requirements on online rental platforms or booking services. Bill 42-26 seeks to strengthen short-term rental compliance requirements for online platforms (Airbnb, Vrbo, or similar platforms).

Does the County have the authority to regulate online rental platforms?

Montgomery County's home-rule authority is broad; however, County legislation must be local in nature and consistent with State public general law. In addition, a County may exercise local legislative authority unless State law preempts it or conflicts with State law. Bill 42-26 does not regulate the licensing of online platforms or the Internet generally; rather, it regulates the licensure of a rental being offered for rent in the County and the platform's participation in transactions involving the rental property in the County.

In Bodin v. New Orleans, 804 F.Supp.3d 669, the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in August 2026, upheld that the city could legally require platforms to verify permits before processing bookings. Id. at 678. Essentially, if the County regulates the platform's "transactional process," not the content a third party posts on the platform, it could withstand a constitutional challenge or federal preemption issues under Section 230 of the Communications Decency Act.

New York City heavily regulates the verification process for an online rental platform before it posts or advertises rental listings in the City. Specifically, the short-term rental registration law¹ requires hosts to register with the Mayor's Office of Special Enforcement (OSE), and prohibits booking service platforms (such as Airbnb, VRBO, Booking.com, and others) from processing transactions for unregistered short-term rentals.²

BILL SPECIFICS

Bill 42-26 has three main provisions for regulating a platform's compliance:

- Verification of operator's license. Requires a short-term rental platform to verify a rental license before listing a short-term rental in the County. The Director of DHCA must make available on the Department's website an electronic verification system through which a short-term rental platform may determine whether a short-term residential rental license is valid, expired, suspended, or revoked.
- Transaction fees prohibited. Prohibit a short-term rental platform from collecting or processing a payment for an unlicensed rental. A short-term rental platform must not knowingly complete a booking transaction or collect a fee in connection with a booking transaction, for a short-term rental that: (1) does not have a valid license reflected on the Department's website; or (2) the Director has notified the platform that the rental is ineligible to operate in the County as a short-term residential rental.

- Annual Reporting. A short-term rental platform must provide the Director with an annual report for each short-term residential rental, provided on a form prescribed by the Department. The report must include: (1) the address for each listed short-term residential rental; (2) the name and contact information of the operator; (3) the applicable short-term residential rental license number; and (4) the dates on which the rental was occupied.
